

gall. quart. 90

Binding:

Binding made of marbled paper, original.

History:

The manuscript is probably an autograph written by the hand of Karl Asmund Rodolphi, a professor of medicine at Greifswald University. Its exact dating, as well as location, is possible thanks to the note: Greifswald. Juill. 1793. – Sept. 93 which is on fol. 1r^o. The manuscript comes from the private library of Karl Asmund Rudolphi. This collection (over 15000 volumes) was incorporated into the Königliche Bibliothek in 1833. In the Königliche Bibliothek of Berlin may be found a complete catalogue of this collection bearing the title Bibliotheca Caroli Asmundi Rudolphi.

Content:

The manuscript contains the French translation of the work Nuove esperienze ed osservazioni sul sangue e sull'origine del calore animale, written by Pietro Moscati, published in 1776. Author of the translation, Karl Asmund Rudolphi, based his work not on the original Italian text, but on the German version of the work, published in 1780 under the title of Neue Beobachtungen und Versuche über das Blut und über den Ursprung der thierischen Wärme. Considering the fact that the translation included in ms. gall. quart. 90 is unpublished, this copy is an interesting object of research. With reference to this manuscript cf. Lemm, p. 18.